I think that Tri-State has become a pretty prestigious Grotto!!!! Don't you?

Here are a few tidbits from the 2012 NSS Convention.

I'm not sure of the total amount of attendees but it was in the neighborhood between 1100 & 1200.

The weather was perfect through Wednesday. The daytime temps were 80-85 degrees and the night temps were 50's to near 60.

Thursday it turned hot! Daytime temps were in the mid 90's.

Friday was another scorcher in the mid 90's again! Then during the banquet all Hell broke loose! As you are well aware a Derecho hit the Mid-Atlantic with winds of 80-90 mph. Lewisburg was really hit hard! The convention campground was no exception! I witnessed at least 3 very large trees that fell and crushed several vehicles and damaged many others.

Seems like bad weather likes to follow the NSS Convention no matter where it is being held!

Here are some pictures of the damage in the campground:

There was no power within 60-100 miles of Lewisburg so there was no gas! Those who were lucky enough to fill up before the storm were able to head home but many were stranded for hours.

Paulette & I were stranded in Covington for 6 hours until our son & grandson-in-law drove 3.5 hours with 15 gallons of gas. I must say that the wait in Covington as a hot one! The temperature for most of the day set right on 102 degrees!

Another convention that will be remembered for a long time!!!!!!

On the following page are a couple of more pictures that were taken during caves trips. Probably the most memorable pictures that I took were on my first trip to Norman. On the way to the cave we came upon 12-15 head of cattle that were leisurely strolling down the road. It was pretty funny following a herd of cattle consisting of at least 2 bulls, several calves, & the rest cows. Everything was fine until the 2 bulls squared off and started butting heads right in front of my Honda. I guess they were trying to assert dominance for the privilege of servicing the cows! LOL!

Here are some pics that Ann Muldoon took in Maxwellton Sink:

Here is a pic from the banquet:

Ready to leave (with very little gas).

Waiting in Covington, VA
